Chronic Kidney Disease Research Center,
Common Disease Risk Factors
Management Institute

Chronic Kidney Disease Research Center (CKDRC) of Tabriz University of Medical Sciences has started its first international educational course namely: symposium and workshop of nephropathology on in 15-17 October 2013. We decided to continue our teaching courses annually with international speakers and audiences in our center which is located in Azerbaijan province in north-west of Iran. Our province has common borders with Turkish, Republic of Azerbaijan, Armenia, and Georgia. These vicinities make us a potential center for regional collaboration and educational activities and to connect with international nephrology organizations. Our major education context would be nephropathology, preventive nephrology, peritoneal dialysis, hemodialysis, transplantation in developing countries, nutrition and renal disease, genetic and nephrology. We also have special focuses on diseases that are endemic in the region. It is very important needs to combine the global scientific vision with local vigilance for health personals. Collaboration between regional centers is very important to expand the educational, preventive and research programs. These regional collaborations not only expand the sciences of nephrology in the region but also help to have scientific achievements with global impacts. For all above reasons, we are planning to continue our nephrology teaching course every year. Each year we are focusing on special areas with a comprehensive review. We hope that a large number of delegates, both nationally and internationally, join us every year in order to become a classic appointment for the experts. Our upcoming symposium would be held with the provisional date of October 2014. "Nephology problems in northwest of Iran and neighboring Caucasia" would be the topic of our next symposium and we try to invite international and regional authorities to discuss on the major topics in a three days of meeting.
